A definition of bullying

Bullying is deliberate, hurtful gestures, words or actions which are repeated.

Examples of bullying are:

- having your lunch money taken away often.
- being teased.
- being left out of games or conversations often.
- being repeatedly hit or kicked.
- being bullied by SMS on mobile phones or through the internet.

What can you do about bullying?

If you are bullied or you know someone who is being bullied, please report it.

Who to report it to

Your teacher, the principal or a professional counsellor in an outside agency. Tell your parents or caregivers too.

How to report it

Tell the trusted adult about where the bullying happened, how often it has happened and what you have done to try and stop it happening.

When to report it

Report the bullying to a trusted adult as soon as it happens. Do not ignore it. When bullying is ignored it may get worse.

What we do about incidents of bullying

- We will listen to the person who has been bullied and the person who has bullied others.
- We will put negotiated consequences in place for the person who has been bullying others. These may include time out, suspension or exclusion.
- We will use counselling processes such as:

Informal talks with the bully seeking to change his or her behaviour. Or it could involve a more structured approach.

The No Blame Approach - This requires groups of children involving the supposed bullies to be convened. Normally there would be a number of influential pro-social children involved. The plight of the victim is described and the group left to come up with a responsible solution. The outcome is then carefully monitored.

It is important to note that these steps may change. At Fulham Gardens Primary School we do not use a "one sizes fits all" approach. This is because each person is different and each incident of bullying is different.
